Southside recently had the opportunity to learn more about the incredible work being done by New Pathways for Children. Their impact is especially remarkable given that they receive no government funding. Every aspect of their ministry—programs, support, and staff salaries—is made possible entirely through the generosity of churches and private individuals.

A few weeks ago, our elders met with Rick Burse and Scott Wilson over lunch to better understand how New Pathways operates. During that conversation, we learned that all of the children in their care attend a private Christian school. Because of the number of students enrolled, the organization receives a reduced tuition rate. We also discovered that churches and individuals have the opportunity to sponsor a child to help cover these educational costs.

After thoughtful discussion, the elders expressed Southside's desire to be part of this meaningful work. We have decided to use the funds collected above our budget on the upcoming 5th Sunday (May 31st) to sponsor tuition for two New Pathways children for the next school year. The total cost to sponsor these two students is $10,000. Any additional funds raised will go toward providing school supplies and clothing for the children.

We will also receive information about our two students—such as their names, ages, and birthdays—so that Southside can encourage them by sending cards or even visiting on special occasions.
